FACING the FACTS

With PHILIP PEARL

How much weight will the CIO Political Action Committee give to the November election?
It's hard for the public to tell because the PAC is a rather tricky outfit. Already it has gone underground and left a new organization to front for it, called the National Citizens Political Action Committee.

But a more practical reason is apparent. The Communist stooges behind the PAC are easy enough to realize that the initial CIO are enough to give any such black eye.

Confirmation is provided by a recent survey conducted by the Gallup Poll. They don't deny the fact that the CIO is not a very popular organization, but their conclusions were right, and conclusions being that a majority of the people in this country would be inclined to vote against, instead of for, candidates who lean the CIO label.

An Emergency Call

Right in line with these observations, we'd like to relate a significant incident. The newspapers recently emphasized the fact that the mayor of a New England city, who was endorsed by the CIO, won the Democratic nomination for governor.

The morning after the votes were tabulated and these newspaper stories appeared, the official in question telephoned a CIO headquarters in Washington. He sounded very disturbed. He said he wanted to make it clear that he was not a CIO candidate, but he didn't believe the CIO would believe the CIO endorsement had been of much help to him and might turn out to be a not cost him the votes of his constituents in his state, who are much more numerous than the CIO. Since his relations with the AFL have always been friendly and cooperative, the candidate's fears were grounded.

We decided to investigate the matter more closely to find out a little more about the CIO's political activities. We discovered that the CIO had been defeated in the primary election in the state of New York. The CIO had been defeated in the primary election in the state of New York. The CIO had been defeated in the primary election in the state of New York.

Let us take up additional question. Curiously enough, reactionary writers and newspapers are not those who emphasize the CIO's political activities most strongly. Why? Do you suppose for a moment that they try to discredit the CIO in its political life? The answer is obvious. They give a CIO endorsement is the strongest campaign argument against a candidate.

Full of Sound and Fury

Now we come to the real root of the question. In order to determine how much weight the CIO Political Action Committee will give to the election, we must first find out just what it is doing.

This was the question that the CIO Political Action Committee was very much in line with the CIO. The CIO Political Action Committee was very much in line with the CIO. The CIO Political Action Committee was very much in line with the CIO.

The reporter investigated and the matter carried and wrote an honest and unbiased report. In effect, he said the CIO Political Action Committee was very much in line with the CIO. The CIO Political Action Committee was very much in line with the CIO.

Summing up the evidence, we would say that the CIO is not a very popular organization, but it is not a very popular organization. The CIO is not a very popular organization, but it is not a very popular organization.

Naturally, if President Roosevelt is elected to a fourth term, it will be in spite of rather than because of the CIO's efforts. The CIO is not a very popular organization, but it is not a very popular organization.

For candidates for the CIO, who are likely to find that the election of the CIO in 1944, as in former years, will turn out to be the kind of death.

Generals Blast Anti-Labor Canard

Insist Troops Have Always Needed

Washington, D. C.—The army and navy officials, who are in the line of the war, have suffered from lack of equipment due to strikes was blamed to misbehavior by two high-ranking Army generals at official press conference arranged by the War Department.

The question put to these general officers: "Has there ever been an instance in which our soldiers and sailors found themselves without munitions to fight the enemy because of strikes or stoppage at home?"

The reply of the first general, an expert in military strategy who has been in the line of the war, was: "The regular press conference to give newspapermen background material and who, in accordance with the War Department's practice, remains anonymous although his comments are being quoted, follows:

"There has never been a case, so far as we have heard, where our men found themselves without munitions to fight the enemy because of strikes or stoppage at home. I have heard in production at home."

General Lucian D. Clay, director of material for the Army, at the first of a series of conferences with representatives of the labor press. He said: "We have met every demand for equipment and supplies since the beginning of the war. We are grateful to the fact that the country has made up to the present time."

Advertising Or Slandering Union

Not Included In Boss's Free Speech

Washington, D. C.—An employer's right to free speech does not mean he can slander or defame his workers, one by one, to defeat a union in a collective bargaining election.

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago, by the way, has ruled in favor of the National Labor Relations Board, which has ruled that the company officials violated the law and interfered with the union in the newspapers preceding an election. It was also charged with the violation of the law by the company officials.

Person Beats Brass Hats: Reconversion Start

Western Teamsters To Raise Fund To Promote Post-War Prosperity

Los Angeles.—The Joint Council of Teamsters, under the leadership of Dave Beck, has launched a drive to raise a million-dollar fund to promote full employment and high national income. The Council outlined the following five-point program:

1.—To ally all southern California AFL unions in support of the drive.

2.—To conduct a public relations and educational campaign.

3.—To promote the objective of full employment by direct planning and participation with business and agricultural leaders.

4.—To establish permanent, centralized coordination of labor-management efforts in business and agricultural leaders.

5.—To obtain full cooperation from State, county and municipal governments in post-war reconversion.

Mr. Beck said failure to create full employment after the war "would be in a period of little feeling between all component parts of our industrial society" and cause needless suffering throughout the nation and throughout the world.

Brown Offers Constructive Program To Protect Employment In Aircraft

Washington, D. C.—Culligan, who is due to take a terrific toll of jobs in the aircraft industry unless proper planning to maintain employment is undertaken now, President Brown of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

He voiced the warning in testimony before the war contracts subcommittee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee and presented a thoroughgoing program for each of the war contracts subcommittee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee and presented a thoroughgoing program for each of the war contracts subcommittee of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

Above all, Brown asserted, employers should be notified of the situation in the aircraft field, declared bluntly. "The workers have no voice in the planning of the aircraft industry," he said.

Some of the aircraft plants, he said, are not doing as well as they should. "The workers have no voice in the planning of the aircraft industry," he said.

The I. A. M. leader also called for the American Labor Government experimental research committee, staffed by leading industrial engineers, to "work out a program on retraining workers in the aircraft industry to take up the slack in the manufacturing of civilian goods."

Some of the aircraft plants, he said, are not doing as well as they should. "The workers have no voice in the planning of the aircraft industry," he said.

Basil O'Connor Thanks Labor Press For Aid To Paralysis Fund Drive

Washington, D. C.—Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and newly appointed head of the Red Cross, thanked the labor press for its "particularly fine support" of the Foundation's annual fund-raising appeal.

In a letter to the editor of the New York Times, Mr. O'Connor said that the drive was the most successful ever conducted and the money raised was more than enough to help the children who suffer from the disease which is now taking its centenary summer. The fund drive was the most successful ever conducted and the money raised was more than enough to help the children who suffer from the disease which is now taking its centenary summer.

While all reports are not yet in, we know now that our 1944 Fund-Raising Appeal was the most successful ever conducted and the money raised was more than enough to help the children who suffer from the disease which is now taking its centenary summer.

During this appeal, the labor press of the United States gave us particularly fine support. Undoubtedly the success of the appeal was due to the large number of reports of the National Foundation's work would return to the families of the men and women workers of America who are doing their best to meet the needs of the nation.

Today, with infantile paralysis again on its summer march, I want to extend our sincere thanks to you on behalf of the thousands of children and adults who will benefit through your efforts and through the contributions from labor generally."
